RESOLUTION

Expressing the sense of the House of Representatives that the Citizens' Stamp Advisory Committee, as an entity of the United States Postal Service, should issue a commemorative stamp in honor of the 150th anniversary of the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

Whereas The Metropolitan Museum of Art (The Met) was founded on April 13, 1870, by civic leaders, artists, businessmen, collectors, and philanthropists for the express purpose of bringing art and art education to the American people;

Whereas over the last 150 years, The Met has built a collection and education programs that reach over 7 million museum visitors from around the country and the world every year, bringing both art and education to millions of Americans in fulfillment of its original mission;

Whereas today The Met is the largest art museum in the United States with over 4 million items in its collection, 80,000 of which are on display at any time, and feature the work of many of the most important artists in history;

Whereas throughout its history, The Met has celebrated American art and artists and presented the first permanent installation in an American art museum of American colonial and early Federal decorative arts and architecture;

Whereas The Met has preserved more than a dozen historic American interiors from numerous buildings slated for demolition to preserve the history of American design;

Whereas The Met now houses one of the world's largest and most important collections of works by American artists, including: Berenice Abbott, Mary Cassatt, Thomas Cole, John Singleton Copley, Thomas Eakins, Daniel Chester French, Winslow Homer, John La Farge, Emanuel Leutze, Edmonia Lewis, Maria and Julian Martinez, Georgia O'Keeffe, Frederic Remington, Paul Revere, Diego Rivera, Augustus Saint-Gaudens, John Singer Sargent, Alfred Stieglitz, Gilbert Stuart, Henry Ossawa Tanner, Louis Comfort Tiffany, Kara Walker, and Frank Lloyd Wright, among many others;

Whereas The Met has built reciprocal memberships with 16 museums across the country to ensure that Americans from every part of the country can enjoy access to the treasures of the museum;

Whereas conservation, preservation, and research has always been central to The Met's mission, and the museum now houses centers dedicated to the conservation of objects, paintings, paper, photographs, textiles, clothing, and other media in the museum's collection, ensuring that these treasures remain accessible to generations of visitors;

Whereas The Met remains dedicated to providing educational resources for millions of Americans through tours, interactive experiences, and educator training;

Whereas in 2018, over 230,000 people participated in school-group tours of the museum, including guided tours with museum experts, self-guided tours tailored to teachers' needs, and opportunities for students to participate in hands-on art projects through the museum's K–12 Studio Art Workshop;

Whereas in 2018, over 5,000 educators participated in The Met's K–12 Educators programs—including teacher workshops, Summer Educator Institutes, and The Met Professional Learning Community—to support teachers integrating the arts into the classroom;

Whereas The Met makes available art-based lesson plans and curriculum resources for free on the museum's website to bring the treasures and learning opportunities of The Met to millions of children around the country;

Whereas The Met has made it a priority to bring art to Americans of all ages and developed the MetFamilies and MetTeens programs and events specifically to inspire the next generation of great American artists; and

Whereas The Met has been an American cultural institution for nearly 150 years; inspired new artists, historians, and collectors; exposed millions of Americans to the history, culture, and art of the world; and remains vital to the cultural health of the Nation: Now, therefore, be it
